School districts often call after a child is injured. Faced with a lawsuit, they are filled with concern and wondering if it's their fault. Most school district officials that I speak to honestly don't know if the surfacing is adequate if the play structure is in compliance with state regulations, if supervision is reached a satisfactory, "standard of care", or in short if they are liable for the injuries sustained by the child at school.

The answers to the questions above on surfacing, play structure safety and playground supervision are covered in the online Playground Supervisor Training Course. The Course highlights supervision responsibilities and "how to keep kids safe". Participants passing the exam at the end of the course will receive a Playground Supervisor Training completion certificate.

Course 2- Peaceful Playgrounds Workshop and Certificate
